Question 1 – What do you like best about the Illinois State University campus.

I love the small feel.

The bus system is great! I do not know why more students do not use it.

Teacher interaction – small classes.

Two years in residence halls.

I love that ISU is constantly looking to improve. I have had a great experience!

I love Cook Hall, the Center for the Performing Arts, the Bone Student Center (Atrium, 3rd floor lounge) and the Quad. These places are full of school pride, beauty, and make me proud to be a Redbird.

The Quad is a major selling point during tours.

The academic buildings, (some of them) are full of artwork or photography of students. The Quad has Reggies painted on them. You can tell you are at ISU at these places!

The flower boxes in the middle of campus by the flag pole/ between Edwards and Moulton - they are beautiful!

The bridge itself-connects the academic buildings to the Bone Student Center and Milner Library.

The Quad (landscaping, community feel).

Cook Hall.

New residence hall renovations.

Center for the Performing Arts.

Bone Student Center's face lift.

The little big feel.

Can make it across campus in 10 minutes.

ISU is working on updating facilities.

The Quad is beautiful and contains all essential buildings.

What was "preached" to me ever since Preview - large University with a small school feel.

It is very accessible to get around each part of the school.

I like how all/most of the major buildings are all in one place i.e., the Quad.

Howe everything you need (class wise) is a few minutes away from each other.

The Quad is very clean, has a relaxing feel, and is a nice place to study/enjoy the weather.

Condensed campus.

Redbird Arena.

Quad/landscape.

The Quad.

Condensed campus.

Teaching program!

Faculty.

Family atmosphere.

Small campus.

Simple, not confusing.

Close to Uptown Normal (I like having the small businesses and the small town feel).

Diversity of the buildings- they do not all look alike.

Spaciousness and cleanliness of the Quad.

The close proximity of all student buildings.

The “green” areas on campus.

Large university with small feel.

The Quad.

The fact that most academic buildings are close to each other (the general “walkability”).

The Quad, how green and open it is.

How close campus is to uptown normal.

The Quad is my favorite part about the University. I think it is beautiful and well kept.

I love the architecture of the buildings, especially Cook Hall and the College of Business building.

The location of the buildings is very convenient.

Nice design of the new buildings.

The old-school feeling on the Quad.

The small school feeling on a large campus.

College of Business.

The Quad, specifically the brick in the buildings and the lamps and clock.

Redbird Arena is awesome!

The Quad!

Small School feel with a lot of students.

Like that the sidewalks get cleared so I do not fall!

How everything is within walking distance.

The trees on the Quad.

The new and advanced building.

The trees on the Quad.

Renovations to academic buildings.

Size.

Proximity of facilities.

State of the art renovations.

Love the Quad.

Big but feels small.

College of Business building.

Subway.

Trees.

Everything is very easy to get to and accessible. I like that almost all classrooms are in or around the Quad and it takes little time to get from class to class.

As a student, I really enjoy the small school atmosphere.

I also like the wide variety of architectural styles portrayed by each building.

I feel like the quad is a great place and encourages students to be more active.

I like how the campus is very enclosed with a minimum of streets passing through pedestrian areas. I would hope that as the University grows that it can continue to go around the streets rather than across them.

The small school feel and individual attention.

The look of the campus (Quad, buildings, etc.).

Cook Hall, Milner Library, Center for the Performing Arts, Bone Student Center (Atrium, 3rd floor lounges), and the Quad. All of the aforementioned are beautiful, full of school pride, and make me proud to be a Redbird.

Great Quad. The trees are amazingly beautiful.

Everything is very close by.
